

Connection Group Questions: 11/27/11

Take it upon yourself to connect with others and God through these questions. This not only helps you process your journey, but enlarges your understanding of what God is doing in the lives of friends, family, co-workers, classmates, neighbors or others in the church.

What from the message “The Designer’s Label” spoke to you?

- Take a second look at our key Scriptures: John 4, Psalm 139

Try to introduce the essence of who you are in three short descriptions that begin with “I am...”

- Repeat this exercise, but this time describe God in only three short descriptions that begin with “God is...”

The Bible lists many things about who God is, from someone we should “fear” to someone we should “come near to.”

Which attributes do you prefer to or tend to overlook?

- Why do you think Jesus made the point of saying His followers must worship God “in spirit and in truth?”

How much do you think you let your feelings guide you:

- If you don’t feel like exercising, what do you do?
- If you don’t feel like saving money versus spending it on something that looks appealing, what do you do?
- If you don’t feel like holding your anger in, what do you do?
- If you don’t feel like listening to God on something He wants you to change in action or attitude, what do you do?
 - How do your feelings influence how you tend to understand God’s identity?

What has helped you learn the truth of God so you can worship Him with greater accuracy?

- If people have the opportunity to claim God is their designer, why might they prefer to claim they’re accidents of nature?
- What could be some signs that you’re revealing something to the world other than God being your “Designer?”
- What have you noticed in yourself that clearly reveals God?
- What are some characteristics you sense every Christian should show? (see Galatians 5 and Philippians 2 for ideas)

Connection Group Questions: 11/27/11

Take it upon yourself to connect with others and God through these questions. This not only helps you process your journey, but enlarges your understanding of what God is doing in the lives of friends, family, co-workers, classmates, neighbors or others in the church.

What from the message “The Designer’s Label” spoke to you?

- Take a second look at our key Scriptures: John 4, Psalm 139

Try to introduce the essence of who you are in three short descriptions that begin with “I am...”

- Repeat this exercise, but this time describe God in only three short descriptions that begin with “God is...”

The Bible lists many things about who God is, from someone we should “fear” to someone we should “come near to.”

Which attributes do you prefer to or tend to overlook?

- Why do you think Jesus made the point of saying His followers must worship God “in spirit and in truth?”

How much do you think you let your feelings guide you:

- If you don’t feel like exercising, what do you do?
- If you don’t feel like saving money versus spending it on something that looks appealing, what do you do?
- If you don’t feel like holding your anger in, what do you do?
- If you don’t feel like listening to God on something He wants you to change in action or attitude, what do you do?
 - How do your feelings influence how you tend to understand God’s identity?

What has helped you learn the truth of God so you can worship Him with greater accuracy?

- If people have the opportunity to claim God is their designer, why might they prefer to claim they’re accidents of nature?
- What could be some signs that you’re revealing something to the world other than God being your “Designer?”
- What have you noticed in yourself that clearly reveals God?
- What are some characteristics you sense every Christian should show? (see Galatians 5 and Philippians 2 for ideas)